SCOPE OF THE WORKSHOP

The objective of the International Workshop on Computational Mechanics of Materials is to present original results in various areas of mechanics of materials. The workshop is intended to cover all aspects of modelling and simulations of the mechanical behaviour. The aim of the workshop is to bring together physicists, applied mathematicians, materials scientists and engineers from academia and industry, and to provide a platform for discussion of deformation and fracture mechanisms at various length and time scales in materials under different loading and environmental conditions. The materials of interest range from traditional materials such as metals, alloys, ceramics, polymers and composites to advanced and emerging materials as well as bio-materials.

WORKSHOP VENUE

The 20th International Workshop on Computational Mechanics of Materials will be held on the campus of Loughborough University where the Wolfson School of Mechanical and Manufacturing Engineering is located. Loughborough is a university town situated in the very heart of England next to cities of Nottingham and Leicester. It is conveniently located within easy access from London (1 hour 20 min by train) and next to the international Nottingham East Midlands Airport (EMA) (7 miles) that provides budget flights to many European destinations. Other nearby airports are in Birmingham, Luton and Coventry (about 1 hour by train from each). Additional information on the location can be found on the web page www.lboro.ac.uk/about/findus.html.

The Wolfson School is easily reachable from the Loughborough town centre (10 min by bus or 30 min by foot) and Loughborough Train Station (bus Sprinter or taxi).

For more information please visit www.lboro.ac.uk/departments/mm/location.html.

ACCOMMODATION

The list of hotels/guest houses in Loughborough (<http://www.smoothhound.co.uk/loughbor.html>) provides all necessary information with respect to accommodation/reservation. Blocks of rooms will be booked for participants in the closest to the venue hotel Burleigh Court situated on campus.
